TCHAIKOVSKY Symphony No. 2, C minor, op. 17

Repertory Sinfonietta Orchestra, Joel Bard, Conductor

Repertory Camerata Orchestra, John Holland, Conductor

HAYDN Symphony No. 99, E-flat Major

The Repertory Orchestra is an advanced, full symphonic orchestra composed of 95 players of excellent technical and musical ability. Repertory Orchestra has performed in some of Boston's most prestigious venues including Symphony Hall, Sanders Theatre at Harvard University, Jordan Hall at New England Conservatory and the Tsai Performance Center at Boston University.

During the season, all members participate in one of two chamber orchestras, Repertory Sinfonietta and Repertory Camerata, the latter of which is conducted by John Holland. There they explore music of the classical period, including great works by Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. By studying such repertoire as part of these chamber orchestras, Repertory Orchestra members develop specific techniques of ensemble playing and musical phrasing to a degree they may not otherwise within the larger orchestra.

Joel Bard has been conductor of the Repertory Orchestra since 1988. Dr. Bard received his Master of Music in conducting from the Juilliard School. He holds a Bachelor of Music from the Cleveland Institute of Music, where he studied oboe under John Mack, former principal oboist of the Cleveland Orchestra. Also active as a biochemist involved in rational drug design, he received his Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1999.
